Mr. Evans Speaks to Classes

On March 13, Mr. T. DeWitt Evans spoke to the Diversified Occupations class and Mrs. Celia Beamer's second period typing class on "Money and The Opportunities in Banking."

Mrs. Joan Smith, Coordinator, introduced Mr. Evans, pointing out that he had been in public school life for many years and now is Chairman of the Appomattox County Public School Board, and that he is a successful business man.

Mr. Evans explained that money represented the medium of exchange but pointed out that money had not always been the medium. In the colonial days tobacco was the medium of exchange.

"Money is a relative thing," said Mr. Evans. He also stated if all of the coin and currency in the United States was divided among the population of the United States, every man, woman and child would have only $163.15. In 1945 each had $189.00. He said that inflation and increased population had caused the drop of over $20.00 per capita.

Mr. Evans explained inflation as more dollars chasing more things. He grave as an example one boy wanting to date a particular girl as compared to three boys wanting to date the same girl.

"Most business is not on a cash basis," said Mr. Evans, "and that is why there is such a need for business training." There is a need to follow up in the business world such as send statements and file.

Mr. Evans gave the following as important features of banking as a career: (1) work is constant, (2) work is interesting because it is varied and you are working with all types of people, (3) opportunities for advancement, (4) good working conditions, (5) performing service to others, and (6) loyalty to the customer and bank's business.

Students in the two classes enjoyed the interesting and informative talk and appreciated Mr. Evans' visit to the school. The DO students had been studying a unit on personal and business banking.

layering is the best method of propagating rhododendrons and this is most successfully done in midsummer. It will take a year, perhaps two, but at the end of that time you'll have a good-sized new plant. To go about this, loosen the soil about two feet from the shrub you want to propagate, then bend a branch, without breaking it, over to touch this soil. If a slight incision is made on the underside, rooting will be quicker. Peg this branch down so that the cut on the underside is in contact with the soil. Pile about two inches of soil on top and keep moist.

Rhododendrons are among the most ornamental of all garden plants. They grow into shapely shrubs, bear lovely flowers, and the evergreen foliage is pleasing at all times.
